

2019–2023

CORPORATE PLAN

Welcome to our corporate plan

Welcome to the Australian Electoral Commission (AEC) 2019–2023 Corporate Plan, which sets our strategic direction for the next four years.

The successful delivery of the 2019 federal election is evidence of our commitment to ongoing improvement. However, we must continue to innovate to meet the challenges of our complex operating environment. To do this, the AEC's values of professionalism, agility, quality and electoral integrity remain highly relevant as we continue to progress.

One of our flagship initiatives is the modernisation of our two main election systems. These systems are critical to delivering our purpose and the stewardship of the electoral process. We are working closely with our stakeholders to ensure we can build new systems which have sufficient agility to respond to future changes in legislation and policy.

Our commitment to modernisation extends further than our IT systems. Our workforce is a vital component of the electoral process and our people are critical to delivering our purpose. Investing heavily in training and support for both our regular APS employees and our large temporary election workforce, will continue. We will also enhance our business processes and election delivery model.

Our 2019–2023 Corporate Plan details our six agency directions and describes how they will enable us to deliver our purpose and ensure an efficient, effective and secure electoral system for Australia. This year, our six agency directions and intended results stay the same, while our performance criteria have been further refined to ensure we are focused on achieving our outcomes.

Our corporate plan is designed to guide us further on our modernisation journey and is an integral part of our performance and reporting framework.

Electoral Commissioner

Introduction

This is the AEC's corporate plan for 2019–2023. The information below provides a high-level outline of the elements in our plan and what they mean. Subsequent pages explore these elements in more detail and show how they work together to deliver our purpose. Our corporate plan sets the AEC's strategic direction over a four-year period.

Purpose

Our purpose is to maintain an impartial and independent electoral system for eligible voters through active electoral roll management, efficient delivery of polling services, and targeted education and public awareness programs.

Functions and activities

Our functions enable us to deliver our purpose.

Our activities enable us to deliver our functions and are guided by our agency directions.

Vision

Our vision outlines our aspirations for the future and guides our internal decision making.

Environment, risk and capability

Our environment outlines the factors or influences that may impact the operation of our agency and how we deliver our purpose.

Our risks outlines potential issues or threats we need to mitigate to ensure we deliver our purpose.

Our capability includes our people, processes and the systems we need to deliver our purpose, and who we cooperate with to do this.

Agency directions

Our agency directions are our medium to long-term objectives. They guide what we do, how we prioritise and how we promote continuous improvement.

Performance

Our performance outlines the results and level of performance expected in meeting our agency directions, and through them, our purpose.

Our purpose

The Australian Electoral Commission (AEC) is an independent statutory authority established by the Australian Government to:

Maintain an impartial and independent electoral system for eligible voters through active electoral roll management, efficient delivery of polling services, and targeted education and public awareness programs.

Our vision

We are a leader in refining and delivering best practice in election management.

Our agency directions

Our agency directions are:

1. Deliver high quality electoral services.
2. Continue to improve and modernise the delivery model for electoral events.
3. Govern the organisation for quality and assurance.
4. Professionalise our workforce.
5. Uphold the reputation of the AEC.
6. Build an agile and responsive organisation.

Our directions remain the same as the previous corporate plan, and are explained in more detail on pages 10 to 16.

Our functions and activities

Our functions

- Ensuring confidence in the electoral roll.
- Conducting successful electoral events, including federal elections, by-elections, referendums, and industrial and commercial elections.
- Undertaking education and public awareness activities.
- Administering political party registrations and financial disclosure.
- Supporting electoral redistributions.

Our activities

Our activities are the tasks and projects we complete to achieve outcomes against each direction.

Our activities are guided by our agency directions and are listed in more detail against individual directions in this corporate plan.

Our Portfolio Budget Statements

Our corporate plan fits within the broader APS Performance Management Framework required under the Public Governance, Performance and Accountability Act 2013 (PGPA Act).

Our corporate plan informs and draws from the Portfolio Budget Statements (PBS) which define our purpose and the proposed funding allocation to achieve this.

In the PBS, the AEC has one outcome:
Program 1.1 – To deliver electoral events.

We report on our performance through our agency directions. The table following maps the performance criteria in the PBS against the AEC's agency directions. Our performance against each agency direction is detailed in pages 10 to 16.

Our environment, risk and capability

Our environment

The 2019 federal election was an opportunity to demonstrate our ongoing efforts to modernise. Increased use of electronic certified lists and improvements to our supply chain management are examples of the modernisation we have achieved.

However, the way we conduct elections must continue to evolve to meet increasing public and stakeholder expectations. We must remain vigilant about physical and online security, as well as information privacy. We continue to grow our efforts to ensure safe and secure elections, while prescriptive and ageing legislation presents some challenges. These factors continue to create a complex and dynamic operating environment for the AEC.

The Australian electoral system presents a number of unique challenges. With no fixed date for federal elections we must be ready to deliver an electoral event at any point in the electoral cycle. We do this through effective election planning and balancing the appropriate level of 'election readiness' with risks and cost.

As evidenced by high levels of voting before polling day in the 2019 federal election, we are acutely aware of greater demands for more accessible and convenient voting options. The AEC goes above and beyond to provide early, postal, inter-division and interstate, mobile and overseas voting options and services within the remit of our legislation. Comprehensive preparations and planning, and key partnerships with various service providers ensure that we are able to deliver these often logistically complex voting options with the appropriate number of ballot papers, materials and temporary workforce in place to enable a seamless and nationally consistent voter experience.

Demand for these voting services continues to grow as our population increases. Advances in technology offer opportunities for the AEC to reinvent and evolve the way we conduct our business. While acknowledging and managing the changing cyber security environment, the AEC continues to seize opportunities to incorporate technological solutions to deliver more efficient electoral events and internal processes, train and support our staff, and provide a voting experience in-line with stakeholder expectations—all while managing the associated challenges and risks.

The Electoral Act outlines a highly prescriptive process for conducting elections which must be balanced with evolving technological, demographic and stakeholder demands for error free, transparent, modern and efficient electoral events. This presents the AEC with an ongoing challenge which we methodically and strategically manage through the six agency directions outlined in this plan.

Our risks

Our operating environment is more complex and unpredictable than ever before. We must be able to adapt and respond to new challenges to effectively engage with and manage risk. It is also crucial that we meet Australian Government and community expectations.

The AEC's commitment to maturing our risk management framework and strengthening organisational capability continues. This means we will:

- legitimise risk taking within our appetite
- strengthen strategic alignment and risk communication
- promote learning opportunities that reinforce positive risk behaviour
- share good practice and lessons
- bolster collaboration in managing shared risks.

An important component of the AEC's governance framework is the risk management policy, which applies to all employees, contractors and the temporary workforce. This policy defines:

- the AEC's approach to the management of risk and articulates how this approach supports the agency objective and directions
- the principles of the agency's risk appetite and risk tolerance
- key accountabilities and responsibilities for managing and implementing the risk framework.

Our risk appetite statement specifies that the AEC accepts low and medium levels of risk and prefers not to accept high and extreme risks. As guided by our purpose, the following table lists our strategic and enterprise risks and impacts.

Our strategic and enterprise risk statement

Our purpose is to maintain an impartial and independent electoral system for eligible voters through active electoral roll management, efficient delivery of polling services, and targeted education and public awareness programs.

Risks

The Commonwealth Electoral Act and the AEC's current operating model loses relevance to the modern day service delivery experience and expectation of electors and stakeholders.

The AEC is unable to uphold electoral integrity and transparency against a changing environment of domestic and global threats.

AEC fails to build trusting relationships with electors, political stakeholders and the government.

The AEC cannot source and maintain a capable and trained APS and temporary workforce.

The AEC is not properly positioned for the future and is unable to deliver its core business and services as its systems and processes are not sustainable, relevant and modern.

Risk Impact

- Disengagement from external and internal stakeholders, employees and temporary election workforce
- More electors vote informally or not at all
- Reduced ability to positively influence electoral policy and legislation

- Electors are disenfranchised
- Election delivery outcomes adversely affected
- Increased external scrutiny
- Privacy or confidentiality breach

- More electors vote informally or not at all
- Reduced ability to positively influence electoral policy and legislation

- Impact on election readiness and change effectiveness

- Reduced ability to effectively deliver core business

Our capability

To ensure we can continue to deliver effective and secure elections into the future, we must modernise the way we do business and adapt to change. We work with a range of Commonwealth Government agencies to protect our electoral integrity.

We remain focused on modernising our processes, delivery model, IT systems and approach to workforce management, and cooperate with others to maximise sustainability.

Our strategic planning and day-to-day operations are guided by the AEC's values of electoral integrity through quality, agility and professionalism. Our values frame how AEC staff work to maintain our commitment to electoral integrity. This means:

- Quality must be evident in every task across the AEC. Best practice drives every aspect of our business.
- Agility is critical. We must readily and swiftly adapt to change. We must operate effectively despite uncertainty, always looking for innovative solutions to meet our challenges.
- Professionalism is our hallmark. A professional AEC comprises competent, knowledgeable and highly skilled electoral practitioners producing work of the highest standard.

Building our information technology capability

IT systems and infrastructure are key to our delivery of electoral events. To leverage advancements in technology, we must re-develop our IT election systems to better respond to contemporary election and security risks, improve practices, and create process efficiencies.

Our core election and enrolment systems are ageing and costly to maintain. We continue to progress a business case to replace these systems so:

- our systems are agile and adaptable
- we use a single modern platform
- IT is fully integrated and sustainable, widely used, understood and user-intuitive
- we meet the expectations of our stakeholders and our workforce.

The AEC's information communication technology (ICT) strategy helps to plan IT investment and aligns capability with the AEC's long-term corporate planning. The ICT strategy aims to provide resilient, modern and secure systems informed by data and insights, and to upskill teams to develop innovative new products and services.

Cyber security

The AEC is fully committed to its cyber security program to manage the threat of cyber-attacks. It works closely with partner Australian Government security agencies to maintain compliance and to better understand the cyber security threat environment. Cooperation with electoral management bodies around the world, including the Electoral Council of Australia and New Zealand, coupled with cyber security training, work to mitigate the risk of cyber security incidents.

Our strategic human resource management

The AEC's workforce is integral to delivering successful electoral events, and must be underpinned by an organisational structure that supports modernisation and workforce planning.

Our evolving organisational design allows us to continue delivering high quality electoral services, while ensuring we have the required capability to address future objectives, and to guide our approach and future investment.

With a network of APS officers across Australia and a temporary election workforce of around 90,000 at a federal election, the AEC continues to focus on ensuring that both temporary and permanent staff are appropriately trained and supported. A national training and education unit ensures we deliver on our strategic priority to professionalise our workforce.

Our performance

The AEC performance framework

The AEC Performance Reporting Framework guides our approach to developing, managing and reporting our performance information. It is reviewed each year in line with the Public Governance, Performance and Accountability Act 2013.

This year, our six agency directions and intended results stay the same, while our performance criteria and methods of measurement have been further refined to ensure we are focused on achieving our outcomes.

In 2018–19 we combined our two reporting cycles: the electoral cycle and the PGPA Act reporting cycle. Our corporate plan addresses both of these through our agency directions. Externally we report on a four-year cycle through the PGPA Act. Internally, we are focused on a three-year electoral cycle encompassing the three phases of election readiness used in our election readiness framework:

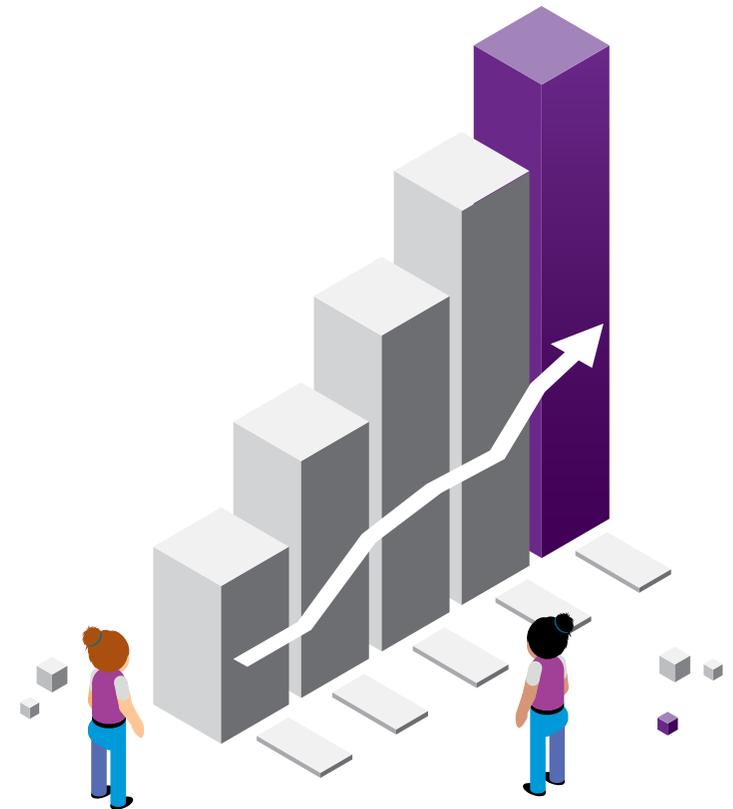

1. evaluate and learn
2. implement change
3. mobilisation.

While we must always be ready to deliver an electoral event, each phase of the election readiness framework directs the activities to be undertaken, and the performance measures for the year. We moved into the 'mobilisation' phase in 2018–19 to deliver the federal election in May. We will move through 'evaluate and learn' in 2019–20.

The 2019 federal election provided an opportunity to further improve our performance framework through our approach to lessons management. Through this cycle of improvement, we continue to link internal planning and reporting to ensure performance priorities are agreed and reported on, both internally and externally.

The 2019 federal election provided an opportunity to further improve our performance framework through our approach to lessons management.

Other performance measures

The regulator performance framework

As a regulatory body we aim to reduce the regulatory burden imposed on electors through enrolment and voting services.

In line with the Australian Government's commitment to reducing the cost of unnecessary and inefficient regulation imposed on individuals, business and community organisations, we measure our performance against the regulator performance framework.

This includes six mandatory key performance indicators set by the Australian Government. The following table outlines our performance against our measures of success.

Our performance against the regulator performance framework

Mandatory key performance indicators under the regulator performance framework

- Regulators do not unnecessarily impede the efficient operation of regulated entities.
- Communication with regulated entities is clear, targeted and effective.
- Actions undertaken by regulators are proportionate to the regulatory risk being managed.
- Compliance and monitoring approaches are streamlined and coordinated.
- Regulators are open and transparent in their dealings with regulated entities.
- Regulators actively contribute to the continuous improvement of regulatory frameworks.

Our measures of success – what we do to ensure we meet these performance indicators

- Support electoral participation and voting formality through communication, education and public awareness activities that inform all Australians of electoral matters.
- Make available timely and accurate information and services to stakeholders when carrying out their legislative responsibilities and obligations.
- Maintain an appropriate level of readiness to conduct a federal election event.
- The governance framework is effective in supporting business outcomes.
- Timely and accurate information and advice on electoral administration that supports the direction of the AEC.
- Maintain a cycle of continual improvement through the election readiness framework.
- Invest in and deliver strategies that increase organisational capability.
