Re: renaming the electorate of Denison, Inglis Clark

To Whom It May Concern,

Please find attached a submission in relation to your current inquiry into the redistribution of federal seats in Tasmania and associated matters. The submission calls for the electorate of Denison to be renamed Inglis Clark.

The attached submission is the printed text of a Change.org petition calling for the renaming. It includes three parts:

1. the text of the petition, which lists the reasons why the electorate should be renamed
2. the list of signatures, which includes well-known Tasmanians such as Saul Eslake, Professor Don Chalmers, Margaret Reynolds and Tim Thorne
3. the list of comments made by signatories to the petition, which also speak to the value of renaming the electorate

If you have any questions please contact me.

Best wishes,

Rodney Croome

Change the name of the electorate of Denison to Inglis Clark

The boundaries and names of Tasmania's federal electorates are currently being reviewed. As part of this process the electorate of Denison should be renamed Inglis Clark to honour Andrew Inglis Clark.

Andrew Inglis Clark was one of the most important reformers in Australian history and a key figure in the story of federation.

Andrew Inglis Clark:

- drafted the Australian Constitution
- advocated for human rights to be included in the Constitution
- advocated for checks and balances in the Constitution to stop abuses of power
- successfully advocated for the establishment of the High Court
- introduced legislation for women's right to vote and to prevent child abuse
- introduced legislation guaranteeing rights and equity for working people
- introduced legislation to prevent animal cruelty
- was a staunch opponent of corruption
- developed the fairest voting system in the world, Hare Clark
- helped establish the University of Tasmania and was its Vice Chancellor
- was a respected Supreme Court judge

- believed in an Australia that would be free, fair, secular and tolerant
- lived in the current electorate of Denison and represented part of that electorate in the Tasmanian Parliament
- is not properly recognised as a reforming law maker and a father of federation

Governor William Denison is not an appropriate person after whom to name an electorate in contemporary Australia. He was harsh in his treatment to convicts, sought to limit democracy and self government in Tasmania, and supported convict transportation against the wishes of the Tasmanian people.

There are precedents for changing the names of Tasmanian federal electorates. The name of the Tasmanian electorate of Darwin was changed to Braddon in honour of Sir Edward Braddon, another Tasmanian father of federation. The name of the electorate of Wilmot was changed to Lyons in honour of Australia's only Tasmanian-born Prime Minister, Joseph Lyons.

The following words were written in praise of Andrew Inglis Clark in the Hobart Mercury in November 1907:

"The name of Andrew Inglis Clark deserves to be remembered...with a tenderness and regard which few other public men have been able to so justly claim at the hands of their fellow countrymen."

Please remember and honour Andrew Inglis Clark by giving the electorate of Denison the new name of Inglis Clark.

This petition will be delivered to:

Andrew Inglis Clark is much more worthy of being commemorated within the electoral structures of this nation than Governor Denison. Inglis Clark was, more than any other individual, the intellect and the conscience behind the establishment of our democratic procedures.

 Andrew Inglis-Clark deserves the honour of having an electorate named after him and has done far more for Tasmania and Tasmanian democracy than Denison who in fact was opposed to democratic values.

The name change would recognise a huge contribution to Tasmania. Denison has almost zero relevance.

Clark's democratic, legal and educational legacy deserves to be recognised. Changing the name of this electorate would be a most appropriate way to recognise his important contribution to Australia and Tasmania

I have been following this discussion for years. Now, at last, we have the opportunity to change the name of the Denison electorate to Inglis Clark. He was a true pioneer of everything we believe in 2016 not a man, like Governor William Denison, who conducted harsh treatment to convicts and actually supported transportation when the people of Tasmania didn't. Let us change the name 'Denison' to 'Inglis Clark' and be proud of our electorate.

I recognise the extraordinary contribution of the man. I regularly tell him story and tell others of the Hampden Rd home he drafted the Constitution in, and can't believe he is such an ignored character, in large part due to the timing of an illness.

 is a vitally important issue. Our first attempt, at the 2008 redistribution failed, even though we had the support of such high profile people as Sir Max Bingham (former Tas. Attorney-General), Justice Michael Kirby and Justice Gerald Brennan. The ONLY dissenting submission was from the late Hon. Michael Hodgman. But, please don't stop at signing this petition. The Electoral Commission will be advertising for public submissions on 2 November. These close on 2 December.

Andrew Inglis Clark is far more worthy of commemoration as one of the authors of the Australian constitution, as a legal, social and electoral reformer, than Sir William Denison. Previous AEC rulings that the name of the electorate should not be changed because it was one of the original electorates at the time of Federation have little historical or intellectual merit compared with the proposition that Inglis Clark's name deserves to be honoured in the same way as others who have had electorates named after them.
