Question: Why do we need to abolish the Cowan electorate in WA? With the relaxing of borders after the pandemic closures, population numbers will likely increase again. Given how close the election results have been in the past, it seems that Cowan is full of concerned and conscientious voters that actively participate. Why take away their right to continue to do so? As for the member for Pearce. He has shown to have no interest in fairly representing his electorate or constituents. He is self-centred and ambitious, ignoring the needs of the people he represents, and panders to big business and fossil fuel interests, not in the best interests of WA. The member for Cowan has shown herself to be a passionate representative and active in the community. At least allow the electorates to have a say in the process. This looks suspiciously like branch stacking when there is already a Liberal majority in Federal Parliament.
