The boundary decision, based IMO on flawed data, ignores community interest and serves major parties, not constituents. North Sydney, with over 1,000 volunteers, electing Kylea Tink, demonstrates strong political engagement. The growing population justifies maintaining its distinct identity. My family's needs aren't reflected in Bennelong, a different electorate from North Sydney, where I've lived for over 20 years and strongly identify. North Sydney's unique social, demographic, and political interests, along with its historic significance as a Federation seat, should be preserved. The area's strong national identity and iconic federal representatives highlight its special character, which should not be absorbed into other electorates.
